

ABSTRACT

Apparatus, and an associated method, for a CDMA communication system. Both closed-loop, power-controlled communication services and best-effort communication services, upon shared channels, are provided in the communication system. A predictor predicts subsequent power level requirements in the system and an allocator allocates power levels at which to communicate best-effort communication signals to effectuate the best-effort communication services.